National Botanic Gardens

The collection of nursery catalogues and seed lists held in the library at the National Botanic Gardens, Glasnevin, is the largest of its kind in the country. With catalogues from Ireland, Europe and around the world, the collection ranges in date from the 1800s right up to the present day. It a valuable resource for horticulturalists and garden historians.

Library staff have fully catalogued the collection and are working towards improving storage. This will increase visitor access to this unique resource.
